Journals Currently indexed

Journals indexed are assigned to one of three levels of importance based on staff's professional assessment of the journals and their importance within the Library's collections and relevance to readers' requirements. 'Priority one' and 'priority two' journals represent what are felt to be the most important and most representative journals from their countries and are (or are likely to be) the most asked for by our readers. We try to index 'priority one' journals within a month of receipt (often within a week of receipt); we try to index 'priority two' journals within the quarter of receipt. The remainder of the journals selected for indexing are done as and when we can. As far as possible it is intended that all the previous year's journals are indexed by the end of the following September
